課程說明	“Women Novelists and British Romantic Literature” is an introductory course that offers our students an opportunity to read two defining texts in the evolution of the novel from the British Romantic period, including Jane Austen’s Sense and Sensibility (1811) and Susan Ferrier’s Marriage (1818). The themes (including class, society, and education) of these novels are different from each other, but they are all important to our understanding of the significant relationship between the novel and British Romanticism as they could represent various dimensions of the country. By reading these two novels, students will be equipped with considerable knowledge of literature produced during this period.
學習目標	Students taking this course will be asked to read several chapters from one of the two novels each week and give a short oral presentation. This course will 1. Enhance students’ critical reading skills 2. Improve students’ English writing ability 3. Develop students’ presentation skills 4. Enrich students’ understanding of British Romantic literature
